PROCESS · 6 STEPS

My design process in 6 steps, from brief to launch.

With a real project behind each one.

01 · BRIEF

One sentence the client agrees with.

Before I open anything. For Lyzma Industries: handcrafted luxury that keeps the feeling of the hand.

LYZMA INDUSTRIES · BRIEF

> “Refined enough for high-end jewellery, warm enough to honour the craft.”

02 · RESEARCH

Learn the question customers already ask.

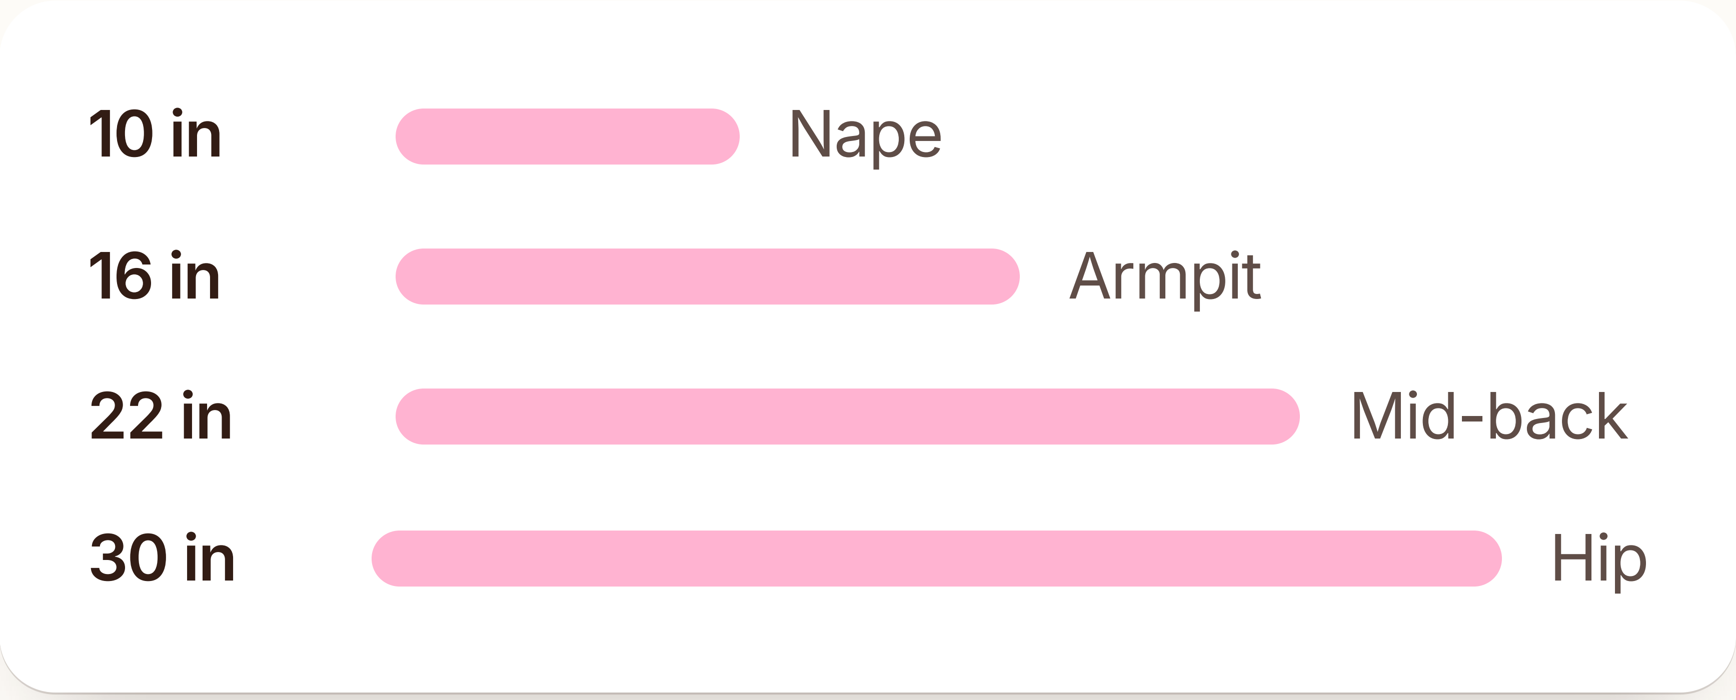
For The Ivory Sukundu it was always the same: where does this length land? The answer became the length guide.



10 in	Nape
16 in	Armpit
22 in	Mid-back
30 in	Hip

03 · MOODBOARD

The feeling, before the screens.

For The Bakery: what does it feel like to bite into something you have craved all day? Hot pink and cream came from there.

04 · CONCEPTS

Two or three directions. Never one.

This week my LinkedIn banner went through five palettes before the darkest brown, ivory and baby pink stuck.

05 · REFINE

The version that survives being used.

Rich & Friends v1 went quiet after nine days. v2 was rebuilt against the reasons people quit: one question a day, and a group that sees it land.

Everything each person planned over the window, against what they actually recorded. Paused and finished goals are left out of both sides.

06 · LAUNCH

Live, measured, and written down.

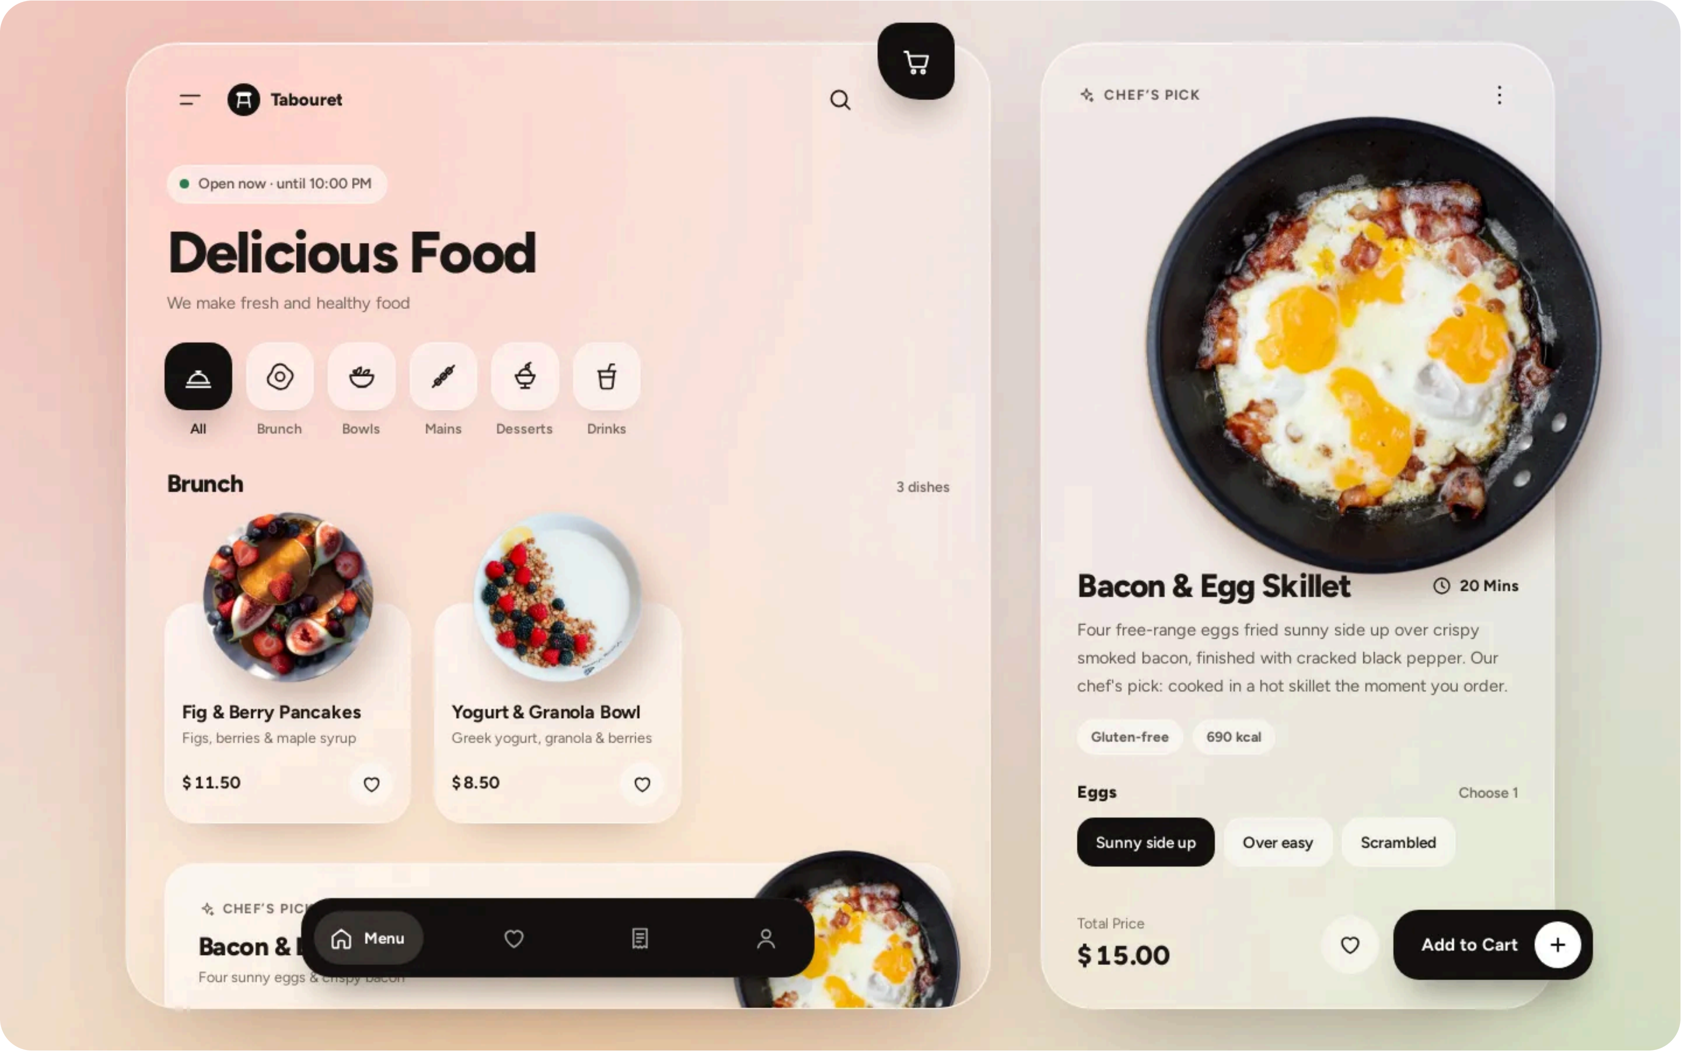
Tabouret's whole ordering flow works in the browser, and every decision lives in a file, so the next version starts from reasons.



We make fresh and healthy food

Four free-range eggs fried sunny side up over crispy smoked bacon, finished with cracked black pepper. Our chef's pick: cooked in a hot skillet the moment you order.
